DEATH AND THE PLAYER.

I watched the players playing on their stage;
An old delightful comedy was theirs,
The very picture of a gallant age,
Full of majestic airs.

Wit, virtuoso, captain, stately lord—
Each played his part with smooth Augustan grace,
And gray and curled, the Olympian peruques soared
O'er each fine oval face.

Anon, young Celia, poised on high red heels,
Advanced with Chloe, the discreet soubrette;
Her laughter rings abroad in silver peals;
Her courtiers fawn and fret.

One was a whispered son of awful Mars,
And one, the favorite, a thing of spleen,
Whose pasquil jests, a stream of falling stars,
Illumined all the scene.

They trod a minuet, and evermore
Betwixt the curtsying lady and her thrall,
A masked and shrouded dancer kept the floor,
Unnoted by them all.

Alas, poor player, that was death's dance indeed!
The curtain fell; the masker's fleshless hand
Compelled thee to his chariot, which with speed
Rolled home to his own land.

And now with cheeks and eyelids that confess
Grim stains of the last midnight's gay disguise,
Th' ingenious haggard actors swiftly press
Where their dead brother lies.

How strange a graveside—oh, how strange a scene!
The player's double life in such eclipse.
What a morality would this have been
On those once mocking lips!

But they are dumb, and there's scarce time for tears;
Back to the town. They're clamoring for our plays.
'Tis good that arch comedian death appears
But once in many days.

—Macmillan's Magazine.

The Market Disturbed.

The woman with a basket on her arm was nosing around the market picking up at various stands such edible bargains as a skillful landlady knows at sight, and at last she pulled up alongside of a stand with a pile of dressed chickens on the counter.

"These fresh?" she asked, laying her hand on them.

"Yes," replied the huckster rather impatiently.

She didn't respond, but began looking at something else, and shortly returned to the chickens, which she sniffed at several times and finally put her nose down close to get a smell that would confirm her suspicions

"Here," angrily exclaimed the huckster, "what are you smelling those chickens for?"

"I ain't smelling them," she said as she moved off. "I was just trying not to," and the rival huckster in the adjoining stall laughed till the other man threatened to lick him in two minutes if he didn't shut up.—Detroit Free Press.

Points About Hanging Pictures.

Pictures should never be hung too high. You often see a choice little painting hung so high that you would have to mount a chair to see what the subject is. Always hang them so that they can be easily seen by a person of medium height. It is considered to be in better taste to use two nails instead of one. It gives a more symmetrical effect, and indeed it is worth considering as a matter of safety. Be very careful to hang pictures in the proper light. If they are to be seen in a strong light, do not put them in an obscure corner, and if painted in bright colors do not place where the sunshine will fall on them. —Philadelphia Press.

Unearthed a Giant's Skull.

The work of removing the old Indian mound in Walnut grove, Martin's Ferry, O., goes on slowly, owing to the care exercised that none of the interesting relics to be found in it be lost. Probably the most interesting article taken from the mound is a huge skull, which would seem to indicate that in the days of the mound builders there were giants abroad. This skull is at least twice as large as the normal average of today. This skull is in good preservation.—Cor. Chicago Herald.

Rapid Criticism of the Swell Girl.

The loan exhibition furnished real lovers of art with endless food for sarcasm at the expense of the swell girl, who goes everywhere and anywhere only because she considers it "the thing."

One of these hurried in on the verge of closing, heavy with 5 o'clock tea, swept a dainty hand across at the matchless Rubens in the middle gallery, exclaiming: "I don't like those. They're so dauby."—New York Times.

A portion of the timbers of General Benedict Arnold's flagship Congress—sunk in October, 1776, in Lake Champlain—has been raised by Captain C. W. Adams of West Addison, Vt. The timbers are of oak and are sound.

NAPOLEON ON BOARD SHIP.

A Glimpse of the Emperor as He Was on His Way to Exile at Elba.

The wind was increasing to a gale. Napoleon asked me, laughing, if there was any danger, which was evidently meant to annoy Baron Koller, who was near him and who had no great faith in the safety of ships, and whom he constantly joked on his bad sailorship, as the baron suffered dreadfully from seasickness. He made some observations to me as to our men's allowance of provisions and seemed surprised that they had cocoa and sugar, and asked how long they had had that indulgence.

This evening a small Genoese trading vessel passed near us. I ordered her to be examined, and, as Napoleon was anxious to know the news, I desired the captain to be sent on board. Napoleon was on the quarter deck. He wore a great coat and round hat. As he expressed a wish to question the captain, I sent him to the emperor on the after part of the quarter deck and afterward ordered him down to my cabin. "Your captain," said he, "is the most extraordinary man I ever met. He put all sorts of questions to me, and without giving me time to reply repeated the same questions to me rapidly a second time."

When I told him to whom he had been speaking, he appeared all astonishment and instantly ran on deck, hoping to see him again, but Napoleon, to his great disappointment, had already gone below. When I told Napoleon the man had remarked the rapidity with which he put questions to him twice over, he said it was the only way to get at the truth from such fellows.

One morning when Napoleon was on deck I ordered the ship to be tacked, and we stood toward the Ligurian coast. The weather was very clear as we approached the land. We had a fine view of the Alps. He leaned on my arm and gazed at them with great earnestness for nearly half an hour; his eye appeared quite fixed. I remarked that he had passed those mountains on a former occasion under very different circumstances. He merely said that it was very true.—Thomas Ussher, R. N., in Century.

The Most Beautiful of All Cats.

The Persian cat is born to the happiest fate of any of his family, for, according to the tales of travelers, he is, in his native land, not only loved and cherished, not only well treated and admired, but thoroughly respected, and he has an acknowledged position and rights. In form the bewitching Persian does not greatly differ from the Angora, but the tail is much more effective, for the longest and the thickest set hairs being at the tip, they form a magnificent plume, which the dignified owner carries proudly erect, waving in the air as he moves. In his splendid silky coat is not a trace of woolliness, and it clothes the graceful creature from the tips of his ears to the well "feathered" toes.

Unless some undreamed of feline marvel shall yet be unearthed, this animal must forever be regarded as the perfect flower of the domestic cat family. Not only does he easily surpass all his competitors in beauty and grace, but he possesses charms of disposition and manner and dignity of bearing, and while most affectionate and loving is still self respecting and independent.—Olive Thorne Miller in Harper's Bazar.

Proud of Their Professions.

I do not know in recent times a more stirring answer than that of Lacordaire, the famous Dominican, to the court of peers in France, who asked him what his profession was, when he replied simply, "A schoolmaster," unless it be the answer of his friend, the Compte de Montalembert, the noblest specimen, I sometimes think, of the modern French laity, to the same question, "A schoolmaster and a peer of France." Nay, it was but the other day that a learned and humble man of science, who will live in moral history as having declared that he had "no time to make money," began his will with the modest words, so great in their modesty, "I, Louis Agassiz, teacher."—Contemporary Review.

Deceit In Animals.

Swindling and deceit are known among animals. In military stables horses are known to have pretended to be lame in order to avoid going to military exercise. A chimpanzee had been fed on cake when sick. After his recovery he often feigned coughing in order to procure dainties. The cuckoo sometimes lays its eggs in the sparrow's nest, and to make the deception surer it takes away one of the sparrow's eggs.—Current Literature.

A Lively Mattress In a Havana Hotel.

A woman who has been traveling in the far south has a curious tale to tell of her experience in Havana:

"The best hotel there," she says, "is a very poor one to an American. When we arrived, we found that the only room with a mattress on the bed was being reserved for some members of the Havemeyer family. As they had not arrived, however, the proprietor consented that I should occupy it. The much vaunted mattress was a poor one of excelsior, and one that I would have scoffed at at home. In Havana one may be not too particular, as will be seen.

"My first night on the mattress was disturbed by an occasional movement beneath me which I could not understand, and which a cursory investigation did not reveal. In the morning, however, I searched more thoroughly and found a slit in the mattress, and on exploring a little deeper a lively rat mother with a nest of young ones.

"Horrified, I called the maid, and pointing to the bed indicated my discovery.

"'Yes,' she said unmoved, 'it is za rat.'

"'I should think so,' said I, 'but what will you do?'

"'Oh,' answered the stolid Cuban, 'I will sew them in again!'"—Her Point of View in New York Times.

The Senses During Somnambulism.

Hammond says there is a great diversity of opinion among investigators as to the activity of the senses, due to the difference among somnambulists as to the use they make of their senses. All, however, agree that the sense of sight is not used. In fact, there are cases where somnambulists read and write in absolute darkness, and who cannot continue with even the mellow light of the moon. The sense of hearing is rarely used, and the sense of taste is generally inactive, while that of smell is still more so. The sense of touch is very differently affected. That by which he is enabled to guide himself through devious passages is the only one which is always awake.

Through profound sleep the various senses and faculties are so greatly lessened that the spinal cord becomes able to control and direct the body in all of its movements. This is so in absentmindedness and reverie. A young lady was playing a very difficult composition on the piano, and at its conclusion burst into tears. She had been watching the death struggles of a favorite bird, and, though her brain had been absorbed, the spinal cord had not been diverted from carrying on the muscular and automatic actions required in the musical performance.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ignorance as a Fad.

One curious point about our young people of the upper circles nowadays is their intense pride of ignorance. To know anything or to have read anything is with them to be a fool. The boys who fail to get into the army are not laughed at as asses, but are condoled with as victims to a hideous system. The idea of sitting through a serious play is scouted with ignominy, and even to know the current news of the day, to have read Mr. Gladstone's speech or to have an opinion on the Uganda question ("Where on earth is Uganda?" would be the chorus) is to render yourself suspect.

A wretched youth at a country house full of young people incautiously gave an opinion on bimetallism. Dire was his punishment. For the rest of his visit he was treated as one afflicted with leprosy. But after all, the affectation of ignorance may cure itself. It is the general employment of indelicacy and the casting aside of maiden modesty in the pursuit of young men, which makes one almost despair of our girls.—Cor. London Times.

Mutual Explanations.

"I am here, gentlemen," explained the pickpocket to his fellow prisoners, "as the result of a moment of abstraction."

"And I," said the incendiary, "because of an unfortunate habit of making light of things."

"And I," chimed in the forger, "on account of a simple desire to make a name for myself."

"And I," added the burglar, "through nothing but taking advantage of an opening which offered in a large mercantile establishment uptown." But here the warden separated them.—Kate Field's Washington.

Aluminium In the Household.

As to the corrodibility of aluminium, it appears that as compared with iron, copper, lead, zinc or tin, it is not so readily attacked by air, water, wine, beer, coffee, milk, oil, butter, gas or saliva. Vinegar and salt will attack it somewhat more, but not enough to render its use as a substitute for iron, copper, etc., in the household utensils undesirable.—New York Journal.

Paul Bourget.

Paul Bourget's popularity in England is due, it is said, to that he is an avowed Anglomaniac. He buys his clothes in Sackville street, his boots in the Strand, and is a devotee of the "tub," which is decidedly an English rather than a French household god. No one can deny, however, that M. Bourget is a Parisian for all that.—Critic.

SONOMA, JUNE 3, 1893.

S. H. GRANICE . . . . . EDITOR

CHAS. CHAYAT, of Butte county, has found a way of ridding his orange trees of the brown scale in a novel manner. He mixed water and sugar together, and with the mixture washed the trunk and lower limbs of a tree. He then sprinkled some of the sugar about the roots of the tree. On the following day the orange tree was alive with ants climbing the trunk and running among the limbs, and before they quitted it the last of the brown scales had been devoured, leaving the tree as clean as a new laundried handkerchief. His success has led him to experiment successfully with other trees, and the idea may be of service to other orchardists.—Rural Press.

COUNTY ITEMS.

A wild cat was shot and killed on one of the principal streets of Petaluma one night last week while raiding a poultry establishment in that town.

In a fight between Indians in Healdsburg, last Sunday night, one named York was stabbed to death by a fellow aborigine named Jim San Diego. The murderer was arrested and is now in the County Jail.

T. N. Murphy, who keeps a second-hand store at the foot of Main street, Petaluma, was badly cut one night last week in an altercation with Charles Jose. The difficulty occurred in Herman's saloon and the weapon used by Jose was a pocket knife, from which Murphy received several slashes. His wounds are not dangerous.

A dissolute character named Winfield Bashan attempted a criminal assault on a little seven-year-old child at Guerneville, last Monday. The fiend was frustrated in the attempt by the screams of the little girl which brought help, and he made his escape. He was subsequently captured near the mouth of Austin creek by Deputy Sheriff Murphy, who drew a bead on him with a Winchester rifle as he was endeavoring to run away from him. Bashan is now in the County Jail at Santa Rosa and a charge of attempted rape has been registered against him.

The Case of C. Galli.

Cæsar Galli, the convicted Italian knife-yielder, is being ably defended by lawyer J. P. Rodgers of Petaluma. The convicted man has so far succeeded in keeping out of the State Prison through his attorney, who really believes his cliant innocent of having done any cutting in the bloody affray in this place last Christmas night. On Monday last when Galli was again called up for sentence, by consent of the prosecution, the testimony of J. F. Miller was taken, after which the case was postponed. Of the three men implicated in the affray it is the opinion of many that Galli, who was the only man who was dangerously cut, was the least to blame of the three involved in the affray. The man who did most of the cutting, F. Clerite, is now serving out a two years' sentence in Folsom. This cutting scrape has been an inigma. It appears when it comes right down to the facts of the case pure and simple that Clerite attacked Galli and Ubaldi with a knife, cutting the latter on the wrist and the former in the groin. Their assailant then made his escape into the dining room of the hotel and from thence through a rear door into the back yard. Ubaldi and Galli, upon discovering they were cut immediately started in pursuit of their assailant, and upon reaching the dining room pounced upon a party who very much resembled Clerite and whom they mistook for their assailant, and it the melee which followed an innocent and inoffensive man was slashed twice across the face with a knife. Now, who did this last cutting to a certainty is the question? Attorney Rodgers says he is going to find it out if he has to appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

Shot While Hunting.

Seconda Campanella, the Italian merchant of this place, while out hunting with a friend from San Francisco, D. Valenzane, last Monday morning, was accidentally shot in the left foot by the premature discharge of his shotgun. The accident occurred about two miles from town. Campanella had his shotgun slung on his back by a strap with the muzzle pointing downwards and while crawling through the brush, the gun being at full cock, the hammers were struck by a twig and the weapon discharged. The shot entered the heel and outside of the left foot making a very bad but not dangerous wound. He fell to the ground and called to his companion, who was some distance away, that he had shot himself. Valenzane went to his assistance and after making the wounded man as comfortable as possible hurried to Sonoma for assistance and in a short time after the accident he was brought into town and his injury attended to by Dr. Vance. In the afternoon Campanella took the train for San Francisco, where he has relatives, with whom he will remain until he recovers the use of the foot.

A Fine Programme.

The following is the programme to be rendered at the Grand Concert to be given by the Sonoma Valley Band on Friday evening, June 23rd, at Weyl's Hall:

Petty Thievery.

Sonoma, like all other towns, has its petty thieves, and of late they have been quite active. One day this week the brass nozzle attached to the washing hose of the Volunteer Fire Company was stolen from the engine house by some miserable wretch who must be a natural born thief. A bunch of keys belonging to Judge Breitenbach was also stolen from the door of the City Hall during the temporary absence of the Judge. In addition to this reports reach this office from farmers adjacent to town of the purloining of grape stakes, fence rails and pickets, which species of stealing has been carried on for several years in this valley, the latter evidently being used by the thieves for kindling wood.

Our Band.

The Sonoma Valley Band is an organization of which the people of this valley are justly proud. It is one of the best trained and finest equipped bands of the State. Years of hard and persistent practice has had its usual result so that musically the band stands easily at the head of similar organizations in the State outside of San Francisco.

The uniforms and instruments are of the highest grade, and the very best that money can buy. The brass instruments were made especially for the band by the Boston Musical Instrument Manufactory, a firm that has the reputation of making the finest instruments in the world, and the clarinets and saxophones are from the famous factory of Aguste Buffet of Paris. The entire set cost $1,430.00. The cost of uniforms, music, etc., has been over $1000, making a total of about $2,500.00, all of which has been paid by the members out of their own pockets, excepting about $100.00, raised by subscription to help buy uniforms.

Every resident of the valley should feel it a pleasure to assist the band in every possible manner, as such a thriving and popular organization right here in old Sonoma is certainly a great credit to the town and valley and shows that Sonoma is alive, and able to make as big and pleasing a noise in the in the world as towns that make many more pretentions.

Is Marriage a Failure?

This silly question, having its origin no doubt in Chicago, which is the wickedest city in the Union, can be answered in one word, "No." As a matter of fact, there are divorces, however, but for every divorce there are a thousand happy marriages. To be sure marriage is a lottery but 999 out of every thousand who enter into the relation draw a prize. This reminds us that at the present time three divorce suits are pending in this county and in every case the wife is the plaintiff, to-wit: Frankie E. Durie vs. Robert H. Durie, Emma DeBoard vs. John F. DeBoard and Amanda M. Baker vs. W. H. Baker (not Baker our local photographer), nor Schweinhardt (the German baker), nor Barbarin (the French baker), business men of this town, as the two latter are bachelors and the other Baker, in addition to taking people's pictures, is a happy married man.

Judge Mesick's Will.

Judge Mesick, who recently died in San Fradcisco, left half of his property to his law partner, Geo. H. Maxwell of this valley. The estate is estimated to be worth between $25,000 and $50,000 and consists mainly of a fine law and miscellaneous library. Judge Mesick in his will says: "First, I revoke any and all wills by me heretofore made. Second, of all that belongs to me I give and bequeath to George H. Maxwell, my former partner, one-half, and to my servant, John Rivers, the remaining half. Third, I appoint the said George H. Maxwell my sole executor. This will is written by my own hand at my room, No. 112 in the Palace Hotel, city and county of San Francisco, California. It is written and signed by me this, the 24th day of February, A. D. 1893. After death I wish to be cremated."

The Sonoma Kindergarten.

Monday, June 12th, is the day set for opening the Sonoma Kindergarten, which for the present will be held in the College building, where there is ample room, and a fine large play ground. Miss Hattie Tuggy, the kindergartner, is highly recommended and is a graduate of the training school. Her kindergarten will be supplied with all the equipments necessary for efficient work, and everything will be done to make it first class from the start, both in kindergarten and primary school work.

Fire.

The slaughter house of C. W. Engelbert, located about one mile southwest of town was completely destroyed by fire last Thursday night at 9:45 o'clock. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have caught from a spark from the fire-place. There were several hundred dollars worth of hides and tallow in the building, which was insured for $400. The loss is about $1200.

Drahms vs. Cummings.

The civil suit of A. Drahms vs. J. W. and J. E. Cummings, which was appealed from the Justices Court to the Superior Court by defendant was decided by Judge Dougherty last Monday in favor of plaintiff, thus affirming Judge Cheney's judgment.

Don't ruin your digestive organs with pills and purgatives. Take Simmons Liver Regulator.

CURES SCROFULA

Mrs. E. J. Rowell, Medford, Mass., says her mother has been cured of Scrofula by the use of four bottles of S.S.S. after having had much other treatment, and being reduced to quite a low condition of health, as it was thought she could not live.

S.S.S. Cured my little boy of hereditary scrofula which appeared all over his face. For a year I had given up all hope of his recovery, when finally I was induced to use S.S.S. A few bottles cured him, and no symptoms of the disease remain.

HARD TO UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER.

How a City Missionary Met His Match In the Use of Language.

"My dear brother," faltered the city missionary with red whiskers and a tremolo voice as he reached through the prison bars and fondled the puzzle faced youth—"my dear brother in God, what untoward circumstance, what unforseen influence, led thy erring footsteps from the paths of rectitude?"

"Once more, Petie."

Again the missionary repeated his question with even a greater depth of feeling.

"Yer curves is too wide fer me, podner. What's de graft anyhow?"

"How came you in jail? What have you done to thus forfeit your liberty?"

"Nawthin," replied the puzzled faced youth as a flood of light broke in on him. "I didn't do nawthin. But I'll tell you how it was. See? 'Bout six months ago in Portland I hooks up with a gilly from Frisco. He had a sack an braces me fer a game of poker. See? I'm pretty flip wid de pasteboards myself, but I sees dere wuz a tapioca in sight an didn't want to queer de mark. See? So I touches de wires to a chum of mine in Salem. He's a dead smooth duck—a foxy bloke with a crockery glim. I tells him to come on an help me peel de pelt off a jasper from de sout. See? Well, we sits in a game wid de Frisco mug and pulls his leg for 400.

"Den he maces me fer a round wid de dice. Sez I, 'Does yer mean biz?' 'Dat's what,' sez he. 'Trot out yer basalt blocks,' sez I. See? Well, I skins him fer a hundred cases an de bones, but the jay wuz dead game an wanted to bowl me fer 50. I takes him up an makes a killin of 80 plunks on Hogan's alley. Den he quits an ducks his nut. See? He didn't let on dat he wuz sore or nothin, and 'bout six weeks later he sends me a letter, tellin me I could make a winnin in Frisco. Tings is comin me way, I tinks, so I lines me clothes wid velvet and goes to Frisco. See?

"De mug meets me at de ferry, trows a few greasers into me, steers me again a brace game, an I sinks me wad. Had to soak me spark to eat on. Den de mug gives me de horse laugh low down, puts de gang on, an I've been skating on me uppers ever since. See? Last night I wuz pinched fer a vag an expect to get it in de neck today, but yer can bet yer feet I'll play even. See?" And the puzzled faced youth scowled ferociously.

At first the missionary listened with an expression of pained astonishment not unmixed with awe. Bewilderment followed, then a look of compassion, changing to righteous indignation as the youth rounded off his tale of woe. Then the missionary hunted up the turnkey and said it was a downright shame to pen up an insane man with criminals. He was going to see the authorities about it himself.—San Francisco Examiner.

A Dream Riddle Solved.

A lady who was fond of riddles dreamed that she met another lady, a stranger to her. "I shall not tell you my name," said the strange lady, "but I'll put it like this: If I had a tame hare which escaped and you caught it and asked me if you might chain it up—that's my name." "Letitia Harrop," answered the dreamer at once; "let I tie a hare up." There was no pause for reflection in the dream any more than in another case.

The dreamer, walking with a friend, met an acquaintance of ovine appearance, who saluted with a curious duck. "What a queer bow!" said the companion in the dream. "Sheep dip," answered the dreamer; a kind of pun which perhaps nobody would have made when awake any more than he would have solved the idiotic riddle of Letitia Harrop.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Need of the Bench.

Man milliners and ladies' tailors are common among us, but a barrister sleeve cutter is indeed a novel type of social development. It all arose from a question at law between two rival claimants for a sleeve cutting device. Claimant No. 1 held a patent for the device which claimant No. 2 copied, but claimed to have improved upon. And to prove to the worthy judge and jurors the truth of the matter the bewigged barrister took the chartlike arrangements and cut a sleeve by each in the presence of the court. Questions of this kind and lawsuits over the fit of gowns demonstrate the need of women on the bench, for the fine points at issue are not within the province of the masculine understanding.—New York Sun.

An Ohio Man's Queer Hen.

An Ohio man has a queer hen. Near the barnyard there is a large "cooler" hanging on a crane, and the hen in question insists on regarding this cooler as her nest. She does not get into it, however, but sits perched on its rim, in consequence of which her eggs are all broken by the fall.—New York Tribune.

No Creature Can See In the Dark.

Those versed in the science of optics tell us that no living creature can see in absolute darkness. Some representatives of the animal kingdom have eyes extremely sensitive to rays of light of low intensity, but there must be some light present or no vision.—St. Louis Republic.

Amusing the Children.

Mrs. McShantee (triumphantly)—I see ye are takin in washin again, Mrs. McProudee!

Mrs. McProudee (whose husband has lost a paying job)—Sure it's only to amuse th' childers. They wants th' windies covered wid steam so they can make pictures on them.—New York Weekly.

Invalids and Gambling.

Too many invalids are given to gambling for the purpose of amusement or pastime. Those who visit Florida, Colorado or California on account of climate, who leave home, friends and business on account of their health, who have anxious friends, or probably some relatives, who are hoping for all or some benefit from the change, cannot defeat the object of their trip in any more certain way than by a resort to gaming. No food, stimulant or rest can replace the lost nervous energy expended in this pastime. It tells on the cool and imperturbable as well as on the nervous and easily upset.

We have often seen pulmonary invalids coming west for climatic benefit who slept all morning with closed windows and tightly drawn blinds that, by the exclusion of sounds and light, they might make up during the day for the rest lost during the night—a night often in a close room with burning gas lamps, and, as is generally the case, so small that what fresh air it may contain would hardly suffice for one man. The deadly effects of these conditions, added to the nervous injury incident to gambling, are sufficient to wreck a previously well and hearty constitution. An invalid may be said to about destroy what little chance he may have by following gambling for pastime.—National Popular Review.

Infected Hotels.

A well known physician recently published an account of the experience of a patient at a so called health resort. Here is a part of the story:

"The patient in question was suffering only from overwork; his family history was clear, and there was no tuberculosis to be traced in his immediate kin or among his ancestors. He went to a health resort at a high altitude to recuperate. He boarded at a hotel in which numerous consumptives were coughing and expectorating; four months afterward he developed tuberculosis and now has a typical case of pulmonary phthisis. The unfortunate condition of these resorts is that there is, as a rule, no system of disinfection of the rooms, verandas, hallways, etc.

"The patients are allowed in most hotels to expectorate where they choose, without restriction. The result is that germs are scattered broadcast in the buildings and outside of the grounds. They become dry and are scattered in the air and inhaled by those exposed. Thus a health resort which in its beginning may have been very effective in combatting consumption becomes, after a time a veritable center of infection."

A Conflict of Authority.

The late Lord Chief Justice Cockburn was an inveterate enemy to drafts, and on the opening day of the Surrey assize several years ago gave orders that all the windows should be closed. Upon arriving at the court the following morning he was surprised to find that this injunction had been neglected, and upon inquiring was informed that the high sheriff was the culprit. Addressing Mr. Evelyn, the high sheriff, he inquired the reason. "As the high sheriff, your lordship," replied Mr. Evelyn, "I consider it to be my duty to superintend the ventilation of this court, and I have therefore directed that the windows shall not be closed." "As lord chief justice I consider it to be my duty, sir," thundered Cockburn, "to fine you £500 for disobedience." And the money was paid too.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Narrow Escape In Russia.

We had just left a station near the Irtish river. The road was near the precipitous river bank. Our horses started at a mad pace, and the driver could not control them. They galloped straight toward a precipice that a turn in the road brought just ahead of us. I thought we were lost. M. de Ujfalvy stood on the carriage steps, revolver in hand, ready to shoot the middle horse, hoping that if he fell dead the others would halt. Some Cossacks who saw the danger rushed to us shouting, "Don't fire." One of them grasped the bridle of the middle horse, and by an almost superhuman effort stopped him. It was time. We could look down into the abyss.—Cor. Manchester Times.

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain, or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as childrens' troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine. ©

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would act violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed or she would be so for two hours. KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

STAR, LANE CO., OREGON, Feb. 8th, 1892.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.,

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly sweenied; tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary. The four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PAXTON.

Price $1.00 per bottle.
